Weather Advisory November 28, 2012

High Surf Advisory in Effect Beginning Thursday Morning and Continuing into Monday for Orange County Beaches

The National Weather Service has issued an advisory for high surf in the Coastal Orange County area. 4 to 7 feet waves with high surf is expected Thursday morning and building 6 to 9 feet by Thursday night through Saturday with sets over 12 feet from Laguna Beach Southward. Surf heights slowly subsiding Sunday and dropping below 7 feet by Monday afternoon.

High surf expected to affect beaches in the advisory areas producing rip currents and localized beach erosion. Entrance to harbors will be very dangerous due to waves washing over jetties and breaking waves, everyone should use extra caution.
